TURNED UPSIDE DOWN

Have you ever had the feeling that God has turned your life upside down and shaken everything up? I have. Seven months ago I said goodbye to a long career in the civil service, my home in London and my ministry in the Church of England. In return, I have received good things in abundance. A very warm welcome to my new Church, our diocese and St Paul's Cathedral. A new home in Carnoustie, which once we got over the darkness of a Scottish November and the total quietness, Fiona and I have both come to love. We have received the support and kindness of colleagues and many people both at St Paul's Cathedral and other churches in our diocese.

There were however, a few things that I did not foresee. As someone who has spent most time on the west coast of Scotland, I did not expect to be totally entranced by the Angus countryside, but I am. I did not foresee a new member of my family arriving but she has. My beautiful granddaughter, Ingrid was born in Epsom on Trinity Sunday and finally, I did not expect to feel so at home so quickly. A brief trip back to London recently confirmed that I belong here now and a new chapter has opened.

So what prompted the leap of faith from all that I knew to something rather different? Well, I think it has ultimately come down to trust. As someone who only came to faith in 2004, most of my Christian journey has been rooted in trust. I trusted God and my Christian community in Wimbledon; I trusted that my vocation to the priesthood was real, that I would survive ordination training and finally that I could live out my calling as deacon and priest. It seems that God had a further call in mind – a relocation 500 miles north.

People have asked me what I miss about London and I can honestly say nothing, except for my family, friends and local racecourses! The move to Scotland, whilst not easy at times, has taught me that we do not stand still in our Christian journey; that we need to be very open to change, risk and the prompting of the Holy Spirit. Most of all, my journey, spiritual and geographical, has taught me that God is, indeed, full of surprises!

A FOND FAREWELL FOR THE REVEREND DAVID MUMFORD

St Andrews Church Brechin bade farewell to Reverend David Mumford and his wife Elisabeth at a Choral Evensong with Bishop Nigel attending.

David is retiring after being Rector of Brechin and Tarfside for 8 years and there were a large number of well wishers to mark this special occasion. He and his wife Elisabeth are now moving to Dunbar.

James Carnegy Arbuthnot spoke on behalf of the congregation of Father David's dedication and devoted service over these years. He added that David and Elisabeth will be very much missed, wishing them good health and happiness in the future.

Faith in Older People?

The Reverend Canon Fay Lamont represented the SEC at a presentation of the research done by Faith in Older people to the Scottish Government's policy of Reshaping Care for older people. The results of the survey can be found at www.faithinolderpeople.org.uk.

They speakers advised us that this was a celebration of the contribution of older people in the community had made. The faith communities had a major input into shaping care in older people because they don't work in isolation but are an important part of the ongoing partner working. Loneliness and isolation among older people were identified as the major issues and we were asked to consider this question. Were we dealing with 'A person with DEMENTIA' or 'A PERSON with dementia'? There are lots of older people services but they need to be accessed and many older people have complex needs or are just simply either frightened or too proud to do this so the faith communities play a huge role in communication.

Faith communities can influence therapeutic care but more importantly can help with also celebrating the spiritual dimension existing within older people.

Spiritual tasks are associated with trying to achieve balance and harmony in our lives so that we can accept our aging process with grace and honesty. T.S. Eliot said there were two fundamental questions in life. "What is my life for? And What am I going to do about it?"

FiOP was the vision and ambition of The Reverend Malcolm Goldsmith of Edinburgh. The SEC still plays an important part in the organisation.

Let me leave you with some questions for your church.

- How aware is your church about the policy on shaping care in older people?
- How well and in what ways do you keep links with older people in congregation at local level?
- Could you consider having a FiOP group where some pastoral care training or sharing could be done?
- Or should this be done at a Diocesan level?

Please respond to flamont53@sky.com or phone 01382453818 for further information or discussion.

Bishops' Lent Appeal

The Diocese of Brechin raised £1200 for the College of Bishops' Lent Appeal for the Scottish Episcopal Institute's formational work with ministry candidates.
Grateful thanks for all the donations

Swaziland: Walking to Clothe the Children.

Young people from our Companion Diocese of Swaziland undertook a sponsored 200km walk over a 7 day period through the mountainous terrain. The aim of the walk was to raise funds and awareness of the difficulties faced by most children who wish to attend school in the rural areas. The poorest children wish to attend school, go barefoot and without proper uniforms. A basic school uniform will cost around £30.

How can we help?

The money raised from sponsorship pledges and collections during the walk is to be used to purchase school uniforms and shoes for the most needy children. The walkers' aim is to provide uniforms for 200 children - although the number in need is far higher.

I hope that individuals, families and/or congregations in our diocese might be inspired to support this worthwhile Companionship project. If you can help, please send or pass any donations to me with cheques made out to Holy Trinity Church.

Centre of Mission Update

Over the past weeks three men have given their lives to Christ. It is early day but all the signs are that these conversations are genuine. It won't be an easy journey out of addiction for some of them but they are doing really well.

We need more people to help out in many different ways. You don't need any experience as we will train and support you. If you would like to explore how you can get involved contact Captain Craig Dowling
